

What Is ISCD?

The International Society for Clinical Densitometry (ISCD) is a not-for-profit organization providing a single resource for multiple scientific disciplines with an interest in bone mass measurement. ISCD membership stands at over 5,600 clinicians, technologists and corporate members. ISCD does not promote specific tests, technologies, or treatments.

The ISCD Mission:

To Advance Excellence in the Assessment of Skeletal Health By:

- Promoting education and a broader understanding of the clinical applications of bone mass measurement and other skeletal health assessment technologies
- Assuring proficiency and quality in the assessment of skeletal health through certification and accreditation
- Supporting clinical and scientific advances in the diagnosis and treatment of osteoporosis
- Promote appropriate patient access to bone mass measurement and other skeletal health assessment technologies

Membership Categories

- Clinician Members (i.e., MDs, NPs, PAs) are individuals who have post-graduate doctoral-level degrees or are non-physician practitioners whose state license entitles them to provide densitometry and similar services.
- Scientist/Researcher Members (i.e., PhDs) are individuals who conduct research in the field of bone densitometry.
- Technologist Members are healthcare professionals who perform bone density tests.
- Corporate Memberships are for companies that maintain an equity position in a business in bone mass measurement technology, diagnostics, therapeutics or other related products (ie: pharmaceutical companies, equipment manufacturers, etc). Each Corporate Membership is entitled a specific number of complimentary memberships for their employees. Other employees of the company are welcome to join as an Industry Member if they do not qualify for membership under any other category.
- Industry Members are individuals who work for a Corporate Member who do not otherwise qualify for membership under any other category.
- Associate Members are residents or fellows in an approved training program.

ISCD is the only society in the world to represent both clinicians and densitometry technologists
